1. MARIAN WALDMAN

"Calling Dr. Kildare! Dr. Kildare—surgery!"

"Those are lines I'll never forget! In fact they were the only lines I had ever had to remember," laughed Winnipeg radio actress and writer Marian Waldman.

"I was a student at Beth Lockerbie's school of radio drama, and 14 years old. Beth was asked by a local movie house to supply someone to speak these lines over a P.A. system across Portage Avenue, and I got the job."

The movie man got the business, too. His Dr. Kildare movie brought in more customers than The Gorilla and the Ape Girl which was running across the street.

Since those early days Marian Waldman has spoken—and written—thousands of words on the CBC radio network. In the twenty years she has been in radio she has played everything from little Dutch boys to Lancashire grandmothers.

Even before the Kildare incident took place Marian had taken part in one of Beth Lockerbie's weekly productions on CJRC. And before that—at the age of 10—she had written, directed, and starred in a play about Jacques Cartier, produced at a school Parents' Day.

Eventually Marian came to the attention of Esse Ljungh and John Kannawin, producers of radio drama at CBC Winnipeg. For a while she played in radio dramas with such well-known actors as Neil LeRoy and Tommy and Jean Tweed. Then at 15 she left for Toronto, armed with a letter of introduction to the late Rupert Lucas, head of the CBC's radio drama department.

"It was a glowing report," Marian recalls, "but the glow faded rapidly when I was told to take an audition.

"I did; I auditioned for the part of a little boy, but I didn't convince the producer—and he said so. I had nothing else to do that day and asked if I could stay and watch.

"All right," he said. 'But if you're going to stick around you might as well keep reading.' I did, and by the time rehearsals were finished I had the part.

"The seal was set for some time

"I've been referred to as a 'panelist' so often lately, I'm losing my identity as an actress," says Toby Robins, our cover personality this week.

Besides being a regular panelist on the top-rated Front Page Challenge show, Toby has appeared in many CBC-TV productions in such dramatic series as On Camera and First Performance. She was recently (February 19) seen as Rachel in the Unforeseen drama Mademoiselle Fifi. To attest to her stature as an actress, Andrew Allan, famous CBC drama producer who recently appeared on Challenge, described her as "the most talented actress I have ever known."

then—nothing but little boy parts, and plenty of them. Finally, my big chance came—a challenging role as a gypsy woman in New Homes for Old, and later the female lead in a play whose cast was led by Bud Knapp."

Success continued from about this point. And disappointments too. On one occasion J. Frank Willis had cast her in a show—one of the Victory Bond Drive shows then current—in which she was to co-star with Janet Gaynor. But she had to settle for a smaller role when the producer realized that Marian's and Janet's voices were too similar. But there were triumphs too: She landed a small part in a play directed by William Strange, author of London Blitz. When Strange heard her read he suggested she take the lead role.

It was during her stay in Toronto that Marian began writing in earnest. She sold her first play with no trouble and went on to write dozens of radio dramas, including a 13-week series of fairy tales pro-

Toronto-born Toby was a model and radio actress at 15, while still at school. While studying at the University of Toronto she played in summer theatre at Gravenhurst, Port Carling, Niagara Falls and Vineland, and also in Bermuda. She made her CBC-TV debut in the first drama televised on CBC.

Her work in television is only one aspect of her busy life. Keeping her home gaily decorated with her own floral arrangements, and looking after daughter Lisa and son Peter, is in itself a full-time job. Even with this tight schedule she has never missed a Front Page Challenge show, and has managed to find time to play in several theatre productions, including Visit to a Small Planet at the Crest Theatre in Toronto last spring. A holiday in sunny Florida is next on Toby's itinerary, and may give her a chance to catch her breath.

The first full scale production of a play by Eugene O'Neill

"Ah, Wilderness!"—Family Portrait

duced by CBC from Vancouver. Marian was still not out of her 'teens.

There was also work for NBC in New York, and for Andrew Allan's famous Stage series.

Marian went to New York partly on impulse and partly because a friend was making the trip. Once there she got in touch with NBC. The network arranged for her to collaborate with someone ("whom I never did meet") on an adaptation of Huckleberry Finn. She also auditioned as an actress, was accepted, and—again on impulse—returned to Toronto.

Back in Toronto she spoke to Andrew Allan who requested the Huckleberry Finn adaptation for his Stage series. It was aired in 1946. "What's next?" asked Allan.

"I'd like to do an original," Marian replied. She was encouraged, and the result was This Man Was My Father. The play was produced with Lorne Green, John Drainie, and Claire Murray in the leading roles, and it became the CBC's greatest radio drama success to that date. It had to be repeated the following season. On both occasions the mail bags at CBC overflowed with requests for copies of the poems which were part of the script.

Next, at Allan's request, she made the first radio adaptations of Sholem Aleichem's famous stories of Jewish life.

While she was working at these major projects, Marian also wrote many smaller plays and did some profitable dabbling in commercial advertising.

While studying journalism at the University of Toronto, Marian met Mort Forer, whom she married in 1947. The two returned to Winnipeg in 1949, left again in 1950 for New Jersey, and came back to Manitoba in 1952.

When Gus Kristjanson arrived in Winnipeg in 1954 to become radio drama producer for CBC he knew more about Marian than she realized; he had been using This Man

MARIAN WALDMAN

Was My Father for teaching purposes in his classes at the Ryerson Institute in Toronto. He asked her for more scripts, got them—and continues to get them.

With Mr. Kristjanson, Marian has enjoyed bringing the works of prairie writers to radio. She has made many adaptations of stories by such people as Edward McCourt, Frederick Philip Grove, and Sinclair Ross. She has also continued to write for network series produced in the east, such as It's a Legend, and Premiere on the Air. For television she has done scripts for the experimental school telecasts and is now writing the script for the new network children's series from Winnipeg—Dancing Storybook.

Acting still plays a large part in Marian's life. She is one of the most frequently heard performers on radio's Prairie Playhouse, the school broadcasts, and the daily Jacksons and Their Neighbours (in which she plays both Miss Hardy and Mrs. Watson).

Among other things, Marian has been a factory worker, a nursery school teacher, a columnist, and a writer of popular magazine fiction. Her husband is a full-time writer and a part-time bee-keeper. The Forers live in a house they planned and built themselves on the Red River at St. Norbert. With three children, two dogs, and a quarter of a million bees, you can safely say that life is really buzzin' for Marian Waldman.

CBC Exports Two Educational Series

The CBC has sold two educational television series to major foreign networks.

The Australian Broadcasting Commission has ordered the 26 programs of The Living Sea series, and the National Educational Television network, Ann Arbor, Michigan, has ordered the 12 programs of Live and Learn a local Toronto physics series which goes to the full CBC-TV network this summer.

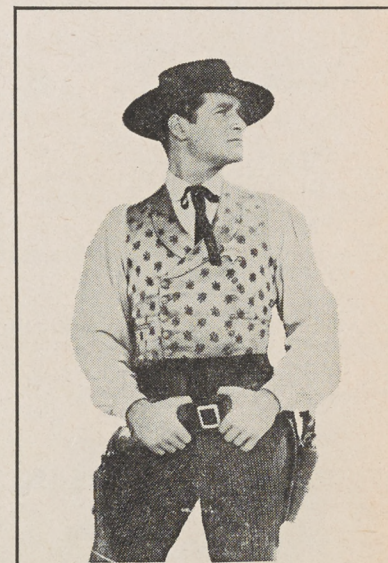

Both sales are break-throughs into new export fields; previous orders from these two networks have been for television dramas.

The Living Sea is being exported from Canada by the CBC for the second time. It was sold first to Granada Television in the United Kingdom.

Live and Learn is the first educational series to be purchased by the National Educational Television network. Previously NET has always produced its own educational features.

A ballet program is like a good meal.

It should be a combination of flavours—something tangy to whet the appetite, something substantial for a main course, and something to satisfy the sweet tooth.—Frank Morris on CBW's "Passing Show."

WYATT EARP ON "SPOTLIGHT"
—Hugh O'Brien, TV's Wyatt Earp, will be guest on CBW's "Spotlight" Friday, May 1. He will be in Winnipeg to take part in the Shrine Circus.

Les Caprices de Marianne

Another "intimate opera" this week on CBC Wednesday Night

A BRILLIANT, witty modern opera with a shock ending, Les Caprices de Marianne, will be presented on CBC Wednesday Night this week by an all-star cast and the CBC Montreal Orchestra conducted by Jean Beaudet. One of a series of intimate operas being featured on CBC Radio, it was announced originally for January 6, and postponed because of production difficulties.

French composer Henri Sauguet wrote the two-act opera in 1954 for the Seventh International Festival of Music at Aix-en-Provence, France. He used a text by Jean Pierre Gredy, based on one of the great successes of the Theatre Francais, a play published in 1833 by French poet, playwright and novelist Alfred de Musset.

The opera requires highly-polished characterizations, and these will be presented by soprano Pierrette Alarie as Marianne; contralto Fernande Chiochio as Hermia; baritone Claude Letourneau as Octave; tenor Jean-Paul Jeannotte as Coelio; bass Roger Gosselin as Claudio; tenor Robert Peters as the hotel keeper; baritone Bernard Diamant as a serenader; baritone Fernand Martel as Tibia; and bass Marcel Scott as a chaperone. The artistic advisor is Gilles Potvin, Jacqueline Richard is the coach, and Carl Little will produce.

As an introduction to the performance, a recording of Henri Sauguet's voice will be heard, explaining why he feels this is his best work, and talking about the intricate interpretations required of the performers. During the intermission there will be a talk on the literary aspects of the 19th-century, by Canadian musicologist and literary critic Paul Roussel.

Les Caprices de Marianne appeals to a wide variety of tastes

F. SCOTT FITZGERALD, ZELDA, AND "SCOTTY."

The private writings of F. Scott Fitzgerald, symbol of "the jazz age" will be examined on another "Journals and Letters" series this week on CBC Wednesday Night on radio. (See page 27).

with its liberal helpings of romance, swift action, intrigue, violence and brilliant lyrics. Coelio is in love with Marianne, the unhappy wife of Claudio, an elderly magistrate of Naples, but Marianne scorns him. Coelio plans to win her by sending his good friend Octave as his spokesman. Octave pleads his friend's case so ardently that Marianne becomes more than mildly interested in him, and the two plan a nocturnal rendezvous. The stage is set for Octave to change places with Coelio so he can meet the capricious Marianne. Meanwhile, her elderly husband Claudio has ordered his men to ambush Octave, since he appears to be Marianne's lover. In the darkness Coelio is mistaken for Octave and is killed. Filled with remorse, Octave turns on Marianne when she offers him her love, and proclaims: "I do not love you. It was Coelio who loved you."

The author of this musical melodrama, Henri Sauguet, was born in Bordeaux, in the south of France, in 1901. When he was 15 he heard some of Debussy's works performed. "This," he recalls, "was the coup de foudre determining my career. Henceforth, my one all-abiding ambition was to become a composer. I was fascinated by all contemporary music, sometimes to the exclusion of the classics."

But although Sauguet is a modernist, he has no use for abstraction in art. He explains: "Only

Piano duet playing - I mean at one piano - is an intimate and friendly sort of music, with plenty of opportunity for laughter, for amateur enthusiasm and loving tolerance of wrong notes. Regina's Flying Sportscaster

One of the most popular personalities on CBCK-TV, Regina, is sportscaster Ken Milton, a native of Brandon, Man., who began his career at CKX in his home town.

A persistent high school principal in Brandon encouraged Ken in athletics. He started at CKX as spare sports announcer, and when duties took the regular man elsewhere Ken stepped into the full-time position.

KEN MILTON

While working as CKX sportscaster Ken found time to take a science course at Brandon college. After seven years in Brandon radio and TV he moved to Regina to become feature sportscaster for CKCK radio and television.

On television in Regina, Ken has conducted sports show of various types—golf shows, curling shows, and during the football season, a top-grade football show in which he works closely with coaches and players. He reports to CKCK-TV on all top sports features in Canada—by telephone and with the aid of film when necessary.

On his nightly sportscast on CKCK-TV he often brings along as many as five guests to talk with him about the sports scene. Another popular feature of his TV show is the small trophy he awards to those lucky souls who achieve such noteworthy things as a hole-in-one or a perfect bowling score.

Ken was an active member of the Kinsmen in Regina until his TV show began to clash with the club's meetings. But he holds a private pilot's license, and still finds time to do some flying with the Regina Flying Club.

the items from the gem show is the famous Inca Crown—made by South American villagers in times gone by as a thank-offering. Then, when hard times left them few material things to be thankful for, they received permission from the Vatican to sell the crown in order to provide themselves with schools and hospitals. An arrangement to sell it to the Czar came to nothing for it coincided with the Russian Revolution so a Chicago group bought it instead. Now it remains, most of the time, in a vault and it makes one of its rare public appearances in Toronto this month. Guide for the exhibit is Dr. Victor Meen.

"A Boy Growing Up"

Tuesday on "Folio" the famous Welsh actor Emlyn Williams will read extracts from the works of Dylan Thomas. These extracts are part of an evening's solo performance called "A Boy Growing Up" which Mr. Williams has given with great success in London and New York. Mr. Williams is currently touring Canada with this delightful, sometimes hilarious picture of Thomas' youth—as he recollected it.

EMLYN WILLIAMS

The Welsh have a word for it: hwyl. It describes one aspect of Dylan Thomas perfectly. But a Welshman can't translate the word and only a Welshman can pronounce it. So Thomas addicts don't use it very much.

Roughly, hwyl denotes a state of drunkenness brought about by one's own words. Content does not count, just eloquence. The preacher, talking of heaven and hell, might go into a hwyl; but so might the man in the pub talking about his local rugby team. In their eloquence they are lost to their listeners, if they have any listeners, which doesn't really matter.

Thomas seems to write himself into a hwyl in his poetry. The words pour out, helter-skelter, as things in themselves, regardless of any outside reference. Poetic activity, he himself has said, "is the physical and mental task of constructing a formally watertight compartment of words, preferably with a main moving column."

But the helter-skelter poem in fact springs from a grubbing process. The impetuous words are individual chunks of rock, each secretly tapped and tested with the poet's semantic hammer.

Louis McNeice wrote in the New York Times, "A quick glance at any of his manuscripts disproves what is still a popular fallacy (to which I once ascribed) that his poetry is 'poured out anyhow.' Why is that improbable line put in line three, stanza one? Because it is second cousin three times removed of that word in line six, stanza twelve. Not every reader will catch every such cross-reference or double meaning . . ."

Certainly, not every reader will Thomas's poetry, particularly his early poetry, disturbs the very

Nursery School Time

Songs and stories for tots, with Miss Teddy and Hoppy. From Toronto.

Our Miss Brooks

Open House

RURAL ROUTE NUMBER ONE—Today Jean Tweed begins another of her popular series of notes and sketches about life on her farm near Palgrave, Ontario, where she lives with her husband Tommy and her son and daughter, David and Terry, and, of course, the pigs! FLOWERS FOR MOTHER — Next Sunday, a great many mothers will be receiving bouquets ranging from a well-worn bunch of dandelions to a dozen long-stemmed roses. So we thought this was a good time to ask an expert from the Garden Club of Toronto to show us some possible ways to arrange spring flowers. The Garden Club members, always full of ideas about arrangements, are especially concerned with them right now, as they are preparing for their spring show at Casa Loma.

P.M. Party

Audience participation show with emcee Gordie Tapp, Rex Loring, vocalist Donna Miller, and Rudy Toth's orchestra. Guest today is dancer Joey Hollingsworth. From Toronto.

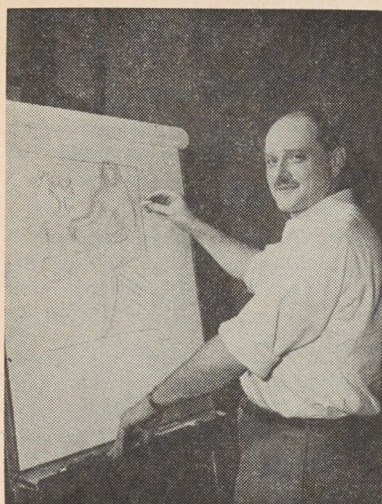

Dancing Storybook

roots of our language (as Edith Sitwell remarked approvingly.) Some of his words are public words, publicly used: a Hindu living in India with a little research could find why Thomas describes the night as "Bible-black." But a North American armed with the Oxford dictionary would still probably not catch the meaning of "petrol" as in "Turning a petrol face blind unto the enemy."

Perhaps the word "petrol" associates in some private way in Thomas's mind with "enemy" and "blind." There's a horrid link with "flame-thrower." But one critic has suggested that the North American forget his dictionary, that "petrol" has no public or private meaning in this context. What Thomas wanted of the word here is its dead sound, and any other dead-sounding word would do as well.

With public and private words all mixed up with nothing words, the poetry of the young Thomas is difficult. But in his prose, particularly that of his later years, the public words pushed out on top. And Thomas became popular. Some critics say this was bad. Others saw his final emergence into light.

Although Thomas's own place in English literature seems to be assured, Louis McNeice and others judge his influence as disastrous. Without Thomas's nice judgment, his playing with words sinks into chaotic obscurantism or extravagant conceits.

"Like all Celts, he (Thomas) had that lovely gift of the gab which could set a company of fieldmice hiccuping like haycocks," says one admirer, bolstering a false generalization with an ill-conceived extravagance.

The life story of Dylan Thomas is well enough known. He was born in 1914 in Carmathenshire, South Wales. As a young man he worked briefly as a reporter in Wales, but soon went on to London for more permanent literary work. He published his first book of poems when he was 20. A growing literary reputation did little to rescue him from constant financial troubles: in fact, it perhaps worsened them, since it gave him a greater opportunity to slip into alcoholism. He died in 1953.

His wife, Caitlin Thomas, summed up the price of success for her husband in a famous line: "Nobody ever needed encouragement less; and he drowned in it."

Sam Slick on Halifax Playbill

Through the pages of Joseph Howe's fiery journal, The Nova-scotian, a strange animal, "half-horse, half-alligator, with a cross of airtquake," first galloped into view in 1835, bearing on its back a Yankee clockmaker and peddler called Sam Slick, immortal creation of Judge Thomas Chandler Haliburton, first Canadian author to win international fame.

Sam was "a tall, wiry man with hollow cheeks and devilish black eyes, stylishly dressed and possessed of an outrageously biting tongue. He had come from Connecticut to sell the Bluenoses his homemade clocks at $40 apiece — clocks that cost him just $6.50."

Wherever he went, Sam shook communities by their roots, and when they finally reassembled themselves, they were never the same. He dashed about "drinking, flirting, bragging, shocking the natives and maintaining a running satire on their manners, morals, politics, social values, institutions and their friends, the British. He accused Nova Scotians of conceit, laziness, ignorance and a lack of confidence in their province." They either hated Sam or admired him or both, but could never ignore him.

Canadian writer Earle Beattie became interested in him while

Eydie Thinks That Kane Is Tops

Singer Eydie Gorme and band leader Jack Kane team up again on TV's Music Makers '59 Thursday night. They first worked together in 1955 on the opening telecast of The Jackie Rae Show when she was a guest and he the musical director.

"I wasn't too familiar with Canada then and I didn't know what to expect," Eydie says, recalling that she arrived in Toronto with her own prepared arrangements. But when she heard the orchestra she threw away her own arrangements and used Jack's. More than that, she took Jack's arrangements back to New York and used them on Steve Allen's Tonight. Soon she had Jack arranging her music for her second album, for an album by her husband and fellow Tonight singer, Steve Lawrence, and for many of her later engagements.

Eydie, voted "the prettiest, peppiest cheerleader" at school, has still the same vibrant personality. Her highly successful recording of Frenesi earned her her spot on Tonight which soon put her at the top of pops singers. Eydie's high opinion of Jack Kane's ability is not confined to her. Buddy Greco, former Benny Goodman pianist and now singer, has said, "As a fellow arranger I think Jack is one of the greatest," and Paula Kelly, singer with Glen Miller, Artie Shaw and other top orchestras has said, "Jack Kane would be considered tops in any circles." Between them, Eydie Gorme and Jack Kane make a very successful show.

Gala Franco-Canadien

• Zing! went the strings of my heart when I watched the 90-minute Gala Franco-Canadien you presented last Sunday. Persons who watched it will agree with me that there is no such thing as Parisian French—only universally understandable French with occasional colourful and lively nuances. If I should express my pleasure every time French features are presented on CBWT I would be writing you week in and out. I reserve my congratulations for occasions so exceptionally pleasant as this one has been for me—and for the French-speaking public in general, I am sure. —Richard A. Gamache, LaBroquerie, Man.

Sholem Aleichem

• Just a note to correct a very minor blemish in a very thoughtful and fine summation of Sholem Aleichem in your last issue.

Many Jewish writers have chosen pseudonyms that are compounds of words, phrases, or even appellations of trades or callings. Some of these are Mendele Mocher Seferim (Mendel the Bookseller), Baal Shem Tov (The Master of the Good Name), Chasam Sofer (Signature of the Writer), and Sholem Aleichem (Peace Upon You).

In none of these cases is it customary or accurate to refer to the individual by the last "name," which is not a surname. To further confuse you, I might add that it is perfectly all right to refer to The Baal Shem Tov as "The Baal Shem," or to Mendele Mocher Seferim as just "Mendele." But the usage is idiomatic, and to be on the safe side, these pseudonyms should always be given in full. The situation is not the same as in English, where Mark Twain may be referred to as "Twain." —Melvin Fensom, Editor, The Jewish Post, Winnipeg.

Hockey Coverage

• We appreciate your good coverage of sporting events, such as the present hockey playoffs. We feel that this is one of the best features of the TV medium. It enables thousands to view an event they would never otherwise see, and to enjoy it in their own homes and as a family. Thank you for your efforts in this field.—Mrs. K. J. D., Winnipeg.

• By reading this week's television program in the newspaper it looks that we are going to suffer through hockey series again. This is the third week that you have taken off very good programs during the week. If they must show hockey it would be sufficient to show only the last quarter of the game. All we have to know is the winner. Or better still put this program in the afternoon instead of that gibberish they call children's programs. After all not everybody is a hockey fan. There is no reason why everybody's got to suffer.—Mrs. M. R., Rosewood, Man.

• We are publishing this fall a book by Leonard Bernstein, entitled The Joy of Music. Mr. Bernstein has been going through his files, looking for a photograph to use on the jacket of the book. His final choice is a picture on the front cover of the CBC Times, published in Winnipeg. Mr. Bernstein feels that this photograph is just right for the book, and we agree with him. I wonder if it would be possible for you to send us a few prints of this photograph. It may interest you to know that the picture found its way to Mr. Bernstein when a Canadian admirer sent it to him, with the comment that it was "the best picture" he had ever seen of Bernstein. We agree.—Michael Korda, Simon and Schuster, Inc., New York.

We were happy to hear the Mr. Bernstein liked our choice of photograph, but we cannot honestly accept any credit for the photo itself. It was supplied to us by CBS.

Reith Lectures

• I certainly enjoyed the recently completed talks on astronomy by Prof. A. B. C. Lovell. Being an amateur astronomer the talks were especially interesting to me. I also enjoy your variety of programs. Classical music is not often heard on our local stations. —James E. Starbird, Topeka, Kansas.

Stu Davis Fan

• Dear Mr. Davis—I like your show, Rope Around the Sun. Everybody enjoys it too. Even when my cat was living he would sit down in front of the TV and lick his pause. I sure wish Rope Around the Sun would last a little longer. My dad was talking about you before you were even on TV. My dad likes you better than some people. I sure like the stories you tell, and every time my brother (Jimmy) sees your show he gets his guns out ready to hear the story. —Your fan, Rae H., (girl), Brandon, Man.

EDMONTON AUTHOR

Elsie Park Gowan has written the play to be heard Thursday night on Prairie Playhouse. It's called "Maestro in Spite of Himself."

MUSIC ON RADIO

By DR. BOYD NEEL, Dean, Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto

"I know what I like and I like what I know." How often do we hear this from listeners. The appropriate comment, of course, is "But how much do you know?" Usually, it will be found that, with this type of listener, it is very little.

All this is apropos of the program on Tuesday evening (Dominion network) headed The Unknown Haydn. In the case of Handel, it is hardly necessary to put such a heading, so generally unknown are the works of the composer. With Haydn, it is almost as unnecessary, but of recent years we have begun to hear one or two slightly outside the well-trodden repertory, and we have suddenly realized that here is a mighty and original genius whose stature has certainly been underrated in the past.

With the "rediscovery," as we may term it, of Haydn, we have also had some nasty shocks. The latest researches tell us that we have all been playing Haydn symphonies in completely wrong versions all our lives and the original scores are very different from those we know. It will take years, however, for all this to be put straight. In the Haydn program on Tuesday evening we are to hear the Nocturne No. 3 in G. Haydn wrote eight Nocturnes for the King of Naples. They were scored for two horns, two hurdy-gurdys, two clarinets, two violas and bass. The hurdy-gurdy looked like a big viola. Inside it there was a wooden wheel turned by a crank. This wheel pressed on the strings from underneath and set them vibrating. The strings were not stopped by the fingers as in other string instruments, but with a complicated system of wooden bridges which were operated by keys. Attached to the instrument was a little organ and the stopping keys not only shortened the strings, but also admitted air to the little organ pipes. The wheel acted as a bow and also worked the bellows of the organ. Apparently, the King of Naples delighted in playing this horrible contraption, hence Haydn's concern with it. Later he rewrote the Nocturnes, leaving out the hurdy-gurdy part, replacing it with a flute and oboe, and giving the clarinet part to violins. It would be rather fun to hear these nocturnes in their original version one day.

In the International Concert on Sunday evening we can hear Bach's Second Brandenburg Concerto. This work has long been a stumbling block to the modern performer owing to the extreme difficulty of the trumpet part. Modern players sometimes try getting over the difficulty of the height at which the music lies by by playing the

The Dog Who Wouldn't Be

When Farley Mowatt was a small boy growing up in Saskatoon he had a variety of pets. His favourite was a dog—peculiar in appearance and in manner, but with extraordinary abilities to perform such feats as climbing trees. With him Mowatt spent many happy, though sometimes harrasing, hours in the city and the surrounding countryside.

Mr. Mowatt has recorded his experiences of a childhood with a favourite dog in his book, The Dog Who Wouldn't Be, which will be read by Montreal writer Weldon Hanbury daily on Trans-Canada Matinee this week. The adaptation for radio is by Mr. Hanbury.

TEENAGERS' TURMOIL

One of the psychiatrist's biggest problems in dealing with teenagers is deciding what is normal turmoil for this age group and what is neurosis.

That's what Irene Robinson of Vancouver discovered in doing research for her play about teenagers, Beggars Who Ride, to be heard on CBC Stage Sunday night on radio.

The play concerns a likeable lad of 17 whose motorcycle is wrecked by hoodlums, touching off a series of unhappy events involving his parents, his gang and his girlfriend.

Before writing her script, Mrs. Robinson asked dozens of under-twenties about their thoughts on life and teenage problems, and then consulted a psychiatrist for his views. He emphasized teenagers' tremendous capacity for quick insight; their reflex action is up to four times as fast as adults'.

Beggars Who Ride will be heard Sunday at 10:00 p.m. on CBW and CBK and at 9:00 p.m. on CBX.

Each Sunday for 13 weeks, famous people will be heard in free-and-easy interviews with reporters equipped with a tape-recorder and a lively curiosity. Informality is the keynote in these conversations. Usually they take place in the home or office of the distinguished guest, who relaxes in an armchair and takes a stroll back through his memories, lingering where the mood strikes him.

The result is a colourful sound portrait of a man or woman at the top of his or her profession, an intimate glimpse of the qualities and events that made a celebrity, and a look at the rest of the world from the lofty pinnacle of success.

The series begins with a visit to Canadian actor Lorne Greene, of Broadway, Hollywood films and TV fame. Gerry Quinney of Toronto cornered the big, dark-haired actor and got from him an entertaining and amusing story of his life and times. In lively fashion Mr. Greene tells of his debut as an actor in the role of Moses . . . aged seven, with a long beard and a soprano voice that deepened in a few years to the warm bass tones that once earned him the title of The Voice of Doom. Mr. Greene tells how he came to get that label, and describes his early years as an announcer, including an occasion when he read a news bulletin in a thick "Joisey" accent, his work in Toronto's Academy of Radio Arts and Jupiter Theatre, and the part his invention of a stop-watch that runs backward played in bagging him his first Broadway role. He tells how he launched his film career, and describes his current Hollywood activities.

All the interviews in the series are from the files of the Dominion Network series Assignment . . . with one exception, a conversation with Lord Clement Attlee, scheduled for May 10. Lord Attlee is not known as an easy person to interview—he's inclined to "clam up." But Bob Ross, who works out of the CBC's London office, employed the right technique and got an absorbing story of Lord Attlee's life. The other biographies-in-sound will feature Andre Kostelanetz, Sir

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

"Coughers." Not long ago, a noted American conductor walked off the stage in the middle of a symphony with the comment, "I'll return when everyone has cleared his throat." Winnipeg freelance broadcaster June Sheppard has another suggestion—put all throatclearers in a soundproof, glass-walled room, like the crying room in churches, where they can hack away to their hearts' (or throats') content.

Cooking School of the Air. Many a new bride has contemplated "going home to mother" when her first encounter with a cook book turns up only recipes that serve six, or eight, or twenty. And many a grandmother, accustomed for more years than she can remember to cooking for a family, suddenly discovers that only grandfather is sharing the dining room table with her. In the seventh of eight lessons today, Eustella Langdon points out that cooking in small quantities can be interesting and doesn't necessarily lead to leftovers for a week. (Mrs. Langdon's recipes for dinners for two, and the other lessons in her spring series, are available in booklet form and may be secured free of charge by writing to "Cooking School of the Air," CBC, Box 500, Toronto).

Betty Tomlinson Interviews. Miss Tomlinson's guest today is Rev. Donald Streat, warden of John Wesley Chapel. The interview was recorded in London, England.

Today's news commentary is by Tim Creery. The recorded music will be introduced by Pat Patterson, and the reading (by Weldon Hanbury) is from Farley Mowat's "The Dog Who Wouldn't Be."

part on a smaller high-pitched trumpet, which method certainly gets the notes more or less accurately, but produces a tone which is certainly not pleasant and, we can be fairly sure, is not at all like the sound Bach intended. We know that these parts were played on much longer trumpets and the tone was quite different in consequence, although the execution was extremely precarious and it was a case of "hit or miss" a lot of the time. What, therefore, is the modern player to do? Either he has to hit all the notes more or less accurately with a small trumpet of unpleasant tone, or he has to strive after the notes more or less inaccurately with a tone approximating to that of Bach's time. Toscanini used to have the trumpet part played on an E flat clarinet. This certainly took all the strain from the listener, but we cannot agree that the sound was satisfactory. The only thing we can do is to go on trying and suffering in the process.

I notice that on Saturday evening (New York Philharmonic - May 2) we can hear a violin concerto by Wieniawski, a famous Polish violinist of the 19th century. Such a prodigy was he, that at the age of eight he entered the Paris Conservatoire, which was very exceptional at that august institution. What was even more exceptional was that he had completed his course by the time he was eleven and had passed out with the first prize. He was stricken with a heart attack at the early age of 43 and died the following year. Joachim tells us in his memoirs that he never heard another violinist to approach Wieniawski.

On Friday afternoon (Vancouver Strings) we can hear the ninth of the Bachianas Brasilieras by Villa-Lobos. These are strange works of much originality by the famous Brazilian composer and are so titled because they consist of tunes having a flavour of his native land, but composed in the manner of Bach. This 9th of the series was composed in 1945 and, in its original form, was scored for "vocal orchestra," but I presume that on Friday it will be performed by strings in this concert by the Vancouver String Orchestra. This is a perfectly legitimate substitution because strings well played are the nearest approach to the human voice at present known to us.

The Oddest Way to Become a Conductor

"You take the oddest way of becoming a conductor I ever heard of, Dirk, but I wish you all the luck in the world."

Years ago, when Dirk Keetbaas had completed a conducting course at the Royal Conservatory in Toronto in a class which included Victor Feldbrill and George Hurst, and was making his first modest ventures in the conducting field, Geoffrey Waddington made this remark to him. Yet Mr. Waddington, well-known CBC conductor and music adviser, was quite ready to acknowledge the sense and method of the young flutist's procedure.

On hand to reply today are Dr. Elizabeth Chant Robertson, associate physician and research associate in the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children and nutrition consultant for CBC's women programs; Dr. Eleanor Long, psychologist with the Forest Hill Village schools in Toronto and consulting psychoogist for the Children's Aid Societies of Ottawa and Barrie; and Mrs. Beth Crofton, home economist and mother of two.

Today's news commentary is by Isabel Wilson of Toronto. Pat Patterson will introduce some of her favorite recordings, and Weldon Hanbury will read another excerpt from Farley Mowat's "The Dog Who Wouldn't Be."

It was in fact quite simple and logical. Dirk had simply determined to make the small organization of the chamber music group a means of approach to the larger ensembles of the concert and symphony orchestra. His early attempts at chamber music work in the 30's had given him a lasting impression of the clarity and refinement possible in musical performance, and his objective was to carry this forward to the larger groups.

"Since I find it enjoyable to make music with others," he says, "my objective is to determine the qualitative conditions necessary to this end; and there is no finer opportunity to do this than through chamber music. Then, as Szymon Goldberg phrases it: 'Of course, apply the principles of chamber music to the large orchestra—why not?' There are many reasons 'why not,' but it is my objective to attain this in actual practice—not just in theory."

Advancing today farther and farther into the conducting field, he sees the conductor's role as one basically of synthesis.

"He is not a drill sergeant," he says, "yet the obligation rests upon him of imposing an artistic discipline upon any group with which he works. His task is to take the combined individualities of all the performers in his orchestra and blend them into a unified and closely knit whole. And above all, when the technical difficulties have been overcome, it remains his essential duty to communicate the spiritual values of music."

Dirk Keetbaas was born in Scheveningen in Holland, the son of a musician who, as violinist, violist, and conductor, has been heard frequently on CBC from Ottawa. After seven years in Amsterdam, he moved to Ottawa with his family, and at the age of 14 was playing the flute in the local symphony orchestra under his father's direction. After graduation in 1940, Dirk joined the R.C.A.F. as first flutist with the Central Concert band, remaining there for five years, during which he organized a wind quintet which gave Paul

What Goes on in Our Schools? In a bilingual country the question of teaching both official languages is one that must be faced in every school. In Canada today the teaching of French in English-speaking schools is receiving a great deal of attention from educational experts as well as from members of the public. Today, in the fourth program of her six-part series on education, Marjorie McEnaney turns her tape recorder to this problem. She visits schools in which a second language is being taught and she examines the various methods of teaching languages. She also reports the views of Dr. Wilder

Penfield of Montreal, world famous neurosurgeon who has commented many times on the physical and neurological aspects of language teaching.

Today's news commentary is by Tim Creery. The recorded music will be selected and introduced by Pat Patterson, and Weldon Hanbury will read another excerpt from Farley Mowat's "The Dog Who Wouldn't Be."

when I have an idea to express do I have inspiration. For me, music must always speak, whether subtly or not, of human association, ideas, emotional and sensuous experience. For me, art must arise naturally and sincerely, the product not only of individual temperament, but of inheritance and environment."

In 1919 he discovered the famous French group Les Six, composed of rebels against romanticism and impressionism in music, and he went up to Paris to hear a performance of Schoenberg's Pierrot Lunaire, a sample of this school of thought. He says: "I don't know what kind of commentary it is, but young students are still making that trip to hear that same work! When I made the trip, however, I did it with a football team, to take advantage of the cut-rate the team was offered." Once there he foresook the footballers, met up with Darius Milhaud, a member of Les Six, and attended a Cocteau play with him. On one side of young Sauguet sat Mil-

Symbol of the Jazz Age

On CBC Wednesday Night this week—The Journals and Letters of F. Scott Fitzgerald. The program has been prepared by Norman Levine, a Canadian living in Britain, and author of the controversial book, "Canada Made Me"

THE STORY has it that after this army discharge in 1918, F. Scott Fitzgerald, later to be author of The Great Gatsby and The Last Tycoon, failed to get a job on seven newspapers in and around New York. So for a year he wrote advertising slogans for streetcars. He sold some short stories to Smart Set, a magazine then being edited by H. L. Mencken. In 1920, his first novel, This Side of Paradise, was published. It may not have been a great novel, but it was truly a voice of the times.

For the next ten years F. Scott Fitzgerald and his wife, Zelda, symbolized the jazz age to their generation. They believed in the "philosophy of popular songs" and they went from wild parties in New York to wild parties in Paris. Fitzgerald gained fame and money from his writings and dissipated both. Zelda gained little fame by her writings and her obsessive attempts at a career in ballet ended only with offers from the Folies Bergieres.

Then in 1929 they buried the jazz age in a shroud of ticker-tape. The Fitzgeralds almost died with it. Through the thirties, Zelda spent much of her life in a sanatorium, mentally crippled for long periods with schizophrenia. Fitzgerald fought constantly against alcoholism, and constantly failed. But many unhappy months scripting in Hollywood helped clear debts of around $40,000 and allowed him to support his wife in hospital and his daughter in school.

In The Far Side of Paradise, his biographer Arthur Mizener points out that Fitzgerald's fights, not his failures, were the important thing. In many ways he may have failed Zelda in her sickness by his drunkenness. But in one of her spells of clarity she wrote pathetically:

"Dearest and always dearest Scott, I am sorry too that there should be nothing to greet you but an empty shell . . . Had I any feelings, they would all be bent in gratitude to you and in sorrow that all my life there should not be the smallest relic of the love and beauty that we started with to offer you at the end."

Equally moving was Fitzgerald's love for his daughter, Scottie. His letters show a tenderness, an anxiety to please—and a tendency to select her friends and her courses at college. The 1920 Apostle of the Impulse became, in 1930, something of a sermoniser:

"Please do not leave good books unfinished, you spoil them for yourself. You shouldn't have started War and Peace which is a man's book and may have interested you later. Don't be so lavish as to ruin masterpieces for yourself. There aren't enough of them."

Behind the pleasure-loving Fitzgerald of the twenties and the tired alcoholic of the thirties stood a mature craftsman. The Last Tycoon and The Great Gatsby are fine novels. J. B. Priestly said of him, "His was a richly confused character . . . the large, loose, excitable adolescent, and this small but compact man behind him, the diminutive artist-priest at the back of his mind."

TRANS-CANADA MATINEE

Mother's Day—a Racket? Sunday, May 10, is Mother's Day, and today Matinee salutes the event with something of a raspberry. Joan Seager of Toronto leads the Bronx-cheering by reminding her listeners that a four-year-old's gift of three wilted dandelions is more of a tribute to motherhood than a ladylike book on growing roses.

The House That Barrie Built. House plans, and what happens when you change them, hidden costs in housebuilding, interest adjustments, NHA mortgages—all these are examined in today's instalment of Barrie Clark's series on housebuilding (third of six). Some horrible examples from Mr. Clark's own experience illustrate his talk. Mr. Clark is a North Vancouver radio announcer and writer.

The Eskimo Woman. The Eskimo woman today has a foot in two worlds—the world of her traditional past, and the world of 20th-century industrialization—and she's making the transition from one to the other with some soul-searching. Irene Baird of the Department of Northern Affairs in Ottawa talks about some of the Eskimo women she has met and about their attitudes to the changes in their way of life.

Today's news commentary is by Isabel Wilson of Toronto, and the recorded music will be introduced by Pat Patterson. Weldon Hanbury will read another excerpt from Farley

"Science Review" Returns

"THIS YEAR we plan to give radio's Science Review a new format," says program organizer David Walker. "Lister Sinclair will now interview scientists as well as having them make statements. He will also have a five-minute science news section in which he will give significant developments of the week."

This year, Sinclair has made an extensive tour of universities and research stations in the Maritimes and three of the new series of eight will deal with his findings. One, for instance, will be on the fish population of lakes, how that population is affected by bacteria in the lakes, and how the fish population in turn affects the country and the forests surrounding the lake. Other topics will include the measurement of very short time intervals (down to millionths of a second), why some species become extinct, and radio-astronomy.

INTIMATE OPERA

haud, and on the other Maurice Ravel. They weren't speaking in those days because Milhaud had written an unflattering review of Ravel's La Valse. "So there I was, on my first trip to Paris, sitting between two great musicians, not talking to one for fear of insulting the other!"

This taste of city life among the "greats" made existence in Bordeaux seem very dull indeed, and Sauguet went home determined to settle in Paris. The following year he did. He was one of the founders of the Ecole d'Arcueil, a group of young composers studying under the famous Erik Satie, leader of Les Six. Satie had a profound influence on Sauguet's style, and it was through his efforts that the Ballet Russe produced Sauguet's ballet La Chatte in 1927, a lively, provocative work that ran for more than 100 performances. Meanwhile critics had given a friendly nod to Sauguet's opera buffe, La Plumet du Colonel, and he went on to write a long succession of musical works for stage, piano, voice, orchestra and films—including the score for the movie Clochemerle.

Henri Sauguet lives on the sixth floor of an old weatherbeaten house in the outskirts of Paris, in an apartment overflowing with his collection of paintings, statuettes and exotic fabrics. He does most of his composing in the less sophisticated surroundings of his country home near Bordeaux.

When he visited New York City for the first time six years ago, for an all - Sauguet concert, Olin Downes reported in the New York Times that Sauguet's "physical and artistic constitution is that of a warm, vivid human being, one who has come to grips at first hand with the problems of life and art, but who has remained an impressionable, sensitive and accomplished artist."

DIRK KEETBAAS

Hindemith's sole work in that form its first performance in Canada.

During this period Miliza Korjus, coloratura soprano, came to Ottawa to sing with the symphony and required a flute obligato for some of her songs. Dirk's success as her accompanist led to a continental tour following his discharge from the R.C.A.F. When he returned to Ottawa he was kept busy recording sound tracks for the National Film Board, and in intervals, going to Montreal for special studies with Rene Le Roy, French flutist, who came up from New York each week to meet a few advanced students at the Quebec Provincial Conservatory. Studies in theory, piano and conducting followed in Toronto, and in eight years there Dirk played with the Toronto and CBC Symphony Orchestras, but there was no opportunity for the regular performance of chamber music. It was the wish to return to this field that brought him finally to Winnipeg, where in the long series of broadcasts by the "Dirk Keetbaas Players," he has had the opportunity at last to demonstrate the meticulous, refined and delicate musical artistry which is his distinguishing characteristic. As first flutist with the Winnipeg Symphony, as recitalist, and as conductor again with the new light orchestral group he has formed for radio (heard Thursday nights on Directed by Dirk) he has become one of Winnipeg's busiest and most prominent musicians.

Ask any commercial traveller which are good towns and you'll find the restaurants play a large part in his judgment. It's something you don't always think of unless you eat out often.—Jean Hinds, on CBK.
